Rocks

Rocks, April 27.- Farmers are very appreciative of the nice rains received lately. Some have planted corn, but lots of the "old timers" still wait for the signs of the moon to be just right.

A few from here attended the Elimination Contest at Spring Creek last Monday night, at which Miss Mary Edith Ranson was a winner in the Young People's Speaking Contest. And Audrey Dale Ingo was a winner in the Junior Scrapbook. They will represent the Association at the district meeting at Brookneal on May 5th.

A very good attendance was present for the various organizations on Tuesday night.

Mrs. James Lewis and infant, Mary Anne returned from the hospital Friday, and will be at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Harris for a few days.

Little Gracie Ranson, the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Frank Ranson, entered Lynchburg General Hospital Wednesday.

Mrs. Aulden Roach is out after being a patient at the Virginia Baptist Hospital.

Quite a few from here attended the Vacation Bible School Clinic at Liberty last Thursday.

Testing For Non-Fat Solids Begins in Va. Dairy Herds

Production testing for non-fat solids is now being done in a few Virginia dairy herds, through dairy herd improvement associations.

And Dr. Norman R. Thompson, dairy scientist at VPI, says it is hoped that the work will extend to more dairy herds in the state. The testing began in the VPI herds.

Dr. Thompson says "non-fat solids" include the protein, milk sugar, vitamins, and minerals found in milk. They are of primary interest because of their high food value. The law in Virginia requires that milk contain at least 8.5% non-fat solids. Production testing will show whether or not milk meets this standard.

As time passes, Dr. Thompson says that the lactation records will show which cows produce milk of below-average composition. These cows can then be removed from the herds. The records will also indicate which cows have inherited the ability to produce milk with high percentages of non-fat solids. It also may help scientists determine what effect different environments have on milk composition.

COWS CAN BE HUNGRY EVEN ON LUSH GRASS

Dairy cattle can be hungry even when they're turned out to lush pasture, says Dr. V. L. Baldwin, dairy specialist at VPI.

He explains that too often the better producing cows, even though they may increase temporarily in milk production, do so at the expense of their body weight. Actually, outside of the stimulating effect of the grass, if cows do increase noticeably in production when they go on grass, it is an indication that they have not been fed as much as they needed.

For example, a large Holstein cow may produce 12,200 pounds of milk, or an average of 40 pounds daily for 305 days. This cow can supply her needs alone if she can eat as much as 47 pounds of good alfalfa hay each day. She will almost be able to eat that much, but only if the hay is of excellent quality.

In order for the cow to supply her needs from grass, she would need to eat four times as much grass as she would hay — or 188 pounds of grass. This wouldn't be easy, even on a lush growth.

So a cow producing 40 pounds of milk daily will be short of her feed needs on the average pasture. A smaller cow producing 40 pounds of milk may have even more difficulty because she can't eat as much.

Dr. Baldwin says it is a wise practice to supply additional feed on pasture.

WE THE PEOPLE

It is strange how words written long ago suddenly fit a situation not contemplated when they were written. An Italian dramatist of the 18th Century wrote, "Society prepares the crime, the criminal commits it."

Nothing could be more pertinent to our present traffic slaughter.

The traffic violation is considered a "white collar" offense by society and the driver who habitually shows a lack of regard for life and property suffers no social disrepute. The solid citizen dislikes to appear as a witness against a violator; although he is a potential victim.

Literally scores of people who drive recklessly and kill are not even charged with manslaughter, but with relatively minor offenses of reckless driving, although they mishandled a lethal instrument knowlingly and under conditions in which killing was not unlikely.

COMPLIANCE WITH SOIL BANK RULES

Farmers who have contracted to participate in the 1959 Soil Bank Conservation Reserve should remember that they must comply with all acreage allotments for the farm, as well as all Soil Bank Requirements in order to qualify for payment, W. D. Hix, III, chairamn of the Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said today.

A program provision that is sometimes overlooked by farmers requires compliance with all acreage allotments established for the farm. If this requirement is not met, the farmer will be ineligible for payment and may leave himself liable for further penalties.

Mr. Hix further pointed out that farmers should be extremely careful that they do not exceed their permitted acreages of Soil Bank base crops .Exceeding this permitted acreage can also make a farmer ineligible for the payment which otherwise he would earn.

Where a farmer harvests a crop from the conservation reserve land or permits the grazing of this land, his Soil Bank payments are forfeited and, in addition, he is subject to a civil penalty of 50 per cent of the payment which would have been made for compliance.

Clearing up new land and bringing it into crop production as a means of offsetting land retired under the Soil Bank is also prohibited and will result in loss of all Soil Bank payments.

SAWFLY MENACE TO PINES IN AREA

Sawfly larvae feeding on pine needles is now at its height in the state, R. S .Burruss, Jr., a member of the Virginia Pine Sawfly Committee reported today. Extensive feeding is taking place in the Louisa and Halifax County areas. Scattered feeding is also going on throughout most of the Piedmont section.

The sawfly larvae eat old needles from pines of most ages. At the end of the feeding period trees will have most of the needles stripped from the leaves. A few weeks from now the new needles will be clothing the tree again. By the end of the summer little or no evidence of damage will be seen.

The sawfly committee is not recommending spraying this year to control the sawfly, Burruss said. He explained that while the trees will lose some growth because of the temporary loss of needles, in no instance so far have trees died because of the eating of the needles. Neither has there been any evidence that trees are weakened to the point where other insects will further damage the trees. Landowners are advised not to sell their trees just because of the sawfly activity.

During the past few weeks, foresters and entomologists have been working on biological control methods which show some promise of helping to control the intensity of sawfly activity another year. Biological control methods are being used for some insects. It is hoped that similar methodis might be developed for sawflies.

In 1970, young people wil l be reaching driving age at the rate of 11,000 a day.

Prince Edward Gets Order On Its Schools

Prince Edward County has been ordered to desegregate its public schools in September .The order came on Monday when the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a lower court ruling which would have given the neighboring county until 1965 to begin integration.

The court directed Federal District Judge Sterling Hutcheson, who had granted the delay, to enter an order requiring Prince Edward to take immediate steps to admit qualified Negro children into the county's white high schools in September.

However, it is stated that Prince Edward has 90 days to appeal the decision, and that the highest court will then be in annual recess, thus indicating that a final ruling may be delayed until October, after the next school session has started.

In event the latest court ruling stands, however, it is understood that Prince Edward has in readiness a set-up for private segregated schools, and will likely abandon its public schools.

Meanwhile, Virginia school officials were in Richmond today for a briefing on the new legislation passed by the recent special session of the General Assembly.

Involved to a considerable degree is the handling of tuition grants in event public schools are closed.

It has been announced that in event of resort to the tuition grant legislation, the grant for Appomattox County would be 23.4.31 per pupil, with $136.11 from the state.

A minimum state appropriation of $22,804 might also be available for Appomattox to keep open some sort of a public school.

Similar figures have been announced for other counties, all being arrived at from a formula set up by the state under new laws.
